

in Frederick, for the courtesy and the kindness I have received here today, and for the courtesy and kindness I have received in the past at these luncheons. It has been most gracious of you to afford me an opportunity to review and reappraise the events which have taken place in our government over the succeeding years. I have enjoyed the meetings immensely. I hope they have been of some benefit to you.